Digital Devices in Our Lives

The first digital device was a huge numerical computer created in 1946 during World War II to send secret messages. At present, 43.3% of the world's population has access to digital devices. Thanks to technology, there are lots of devices we can use to study, to obtain precise information and share it in seconds, to communicate worldwide, etc. However, not everyone uses technology correctly. Some people get sick because they play video games for hours and others lose their money because they fall into digital traps. That's why we have to manage our time correctly on digital devices!
