Read this article. True (T) or false (F)? What's your relationship with your siblings like?

- 1 Brothers and sisters fight more when they're children than as adults.
- 2 It's unusual for siblings to change their opinions of each other.
- 3 Rivalry always starts when the second child is born.
- 4 Parents don't like to see competition between their children.
- 5 The Jacksons had a better relationship when they were younger.

Sibling Rivalry

next minute you can't stand that same sibling. Competition between brothers and sisters can start before the second child arrives and it continues as children get older and they have to share toys, food and, most importantly, attention from their parents.

It can be hard for parents to watch, but it's very normal and, as children get older, the rivalry hopefully changes into a warm friendship—but not for everyone! Look at the Jacksons. They used to make music together and now they fight all the time!

Do you get along with your brothers and sisters? Are they your best friends or do you never see them? It's really common for siblings to fight, especially when they're young.

And don't be surprised if one minute you love your brother or sister and the
