Most people watch television as part of their daily routine. There are plenty of different types of programmes to choose from. You can see soap operas, cartoons, quiz shows, documentaries and many more. But what about a reality show where you can watch people watching TV. Sounds strange doesn't it?

Well, in the UK, there is a TV programme exactly like this. Its name is Gogglebox and it's very popular. Every Friday night, up to 5 million viewers tune into Gogglebox to see people watching a range of current TV programmes and news announcements.

The show films the same people each week and their reactions can be very entertaining. You can see people smile, laugh, cry and even get angry about the things they are watching. Sometimes, they have fascinating discussions about what they watch and it is very interesting to hear so many different views and opinions.

On the show, there are lots of different people with different jobs and lifestyles. This includes an elderly man and his wife from Liverpool, a family of four with five dogs in Manchester and a father with his two sons in Derby. In the beginning, no one knew who these people were. However, now, they are very well-known. With such interesting people from all around the UK, it's no wonder Gogglebox is such a popular TV programme.
