1. How do Greek people live?
 2. How did Ancient Greece look like?
 3. What is the structure of Greek government?
 4. What are the Greek geography and landscape like?
 5. What is the nature of Greece like?
 6. How does Greece try to protect its nature?
 7. How did the Greeks honour their gods?
- A. Greece is the southernmost country in Europe, sharing borders with Albania, Bulgaria, Macedonia, and Turkey. The mainland has rugged mountains, dense forests, and beautiful lakes — but the country is best known for the thousands of islands dotting the blue Aegean Sea to the east, the Mediterranean Sea to the south, and the Ionian Sea to the west. Greece is divided into three geographical regions — the mainland, the islands, and the Peloponnese, the large peninsula south of the mainland.
- B. Hundreds of years ago, most of the country was covered in forest. But over the centuries, the trees were cut down for firewood, lumber and to make room for farms. Today, forests can be found mainly in the Pindus and Rhodope mountain ranges. Greece has ten national parks, which help to conserve the country's natural and historic landmarks. Marine parks help protect the habitats of two of Europe's most endangered sea creatures, the loggerhead turtle and the monk seal.
- C. The long coastline and clear waters make Greece an ideal location to spot lots of cool sea life, including starfish, sea anemones, sponges, and seahorses. Greece is home to lots of fascinating plant life, too. Bird watching is also popular in Greece, where geese, ducks and swallows stop over during their migration from Africa to Europe.
- D. The Ancient Greeks held many festivals in honour of their gods. To celebrate the god Zeus the first Greek Olympics were held in the city of Olympia in 776 BC and are thought to have inspired our own Olympic Games! Only men could compete in the events such as sprinting, long jump, discus, javelin, wrestling and chariot racing. The winners of each event were given a wreath of leaves.
- E. Family life is considered very important in Greece. Children often live with their parents, even after they get married. Greeks live long lives and it is thought that their varied diet of olives, olive oil, lamb, fish, squid, chickpeas and lots of fruits and vegetables keep them healthy. Nearly two-thirds of Greeks live in large cities. Athens is the largest city, with over 3.7 million people crowding the metropolis.
- F. Greece abolished their monarchy in 1975 and became a parliamentary republic. Under the new constitution there is a president and prime Minister. The prime minister has the most power, and is the leader of the party running the country. The president selects cabinet ministers who run different government departments. Greece became part of European Union in 1981.

Saving Languages

Five hundred years ago Europeans arrived at a new continent. They brought new cultures and languages to this place which they called America. However, there were already people living there who had their own cultures and languages. And so, a terrible part of history began.

As more Europeans arrived, there was a fight for the land with the native American Indians. By the end of the nineteenth century, the Indian tribes were moved to reservations. A lot of their children were taken away to boarding schools and these children were taught to speak English. By the end of the twentieth century more than half of the Native Americans in the US were living in cities. They gave up speaking their old tribal language and only used English. As a result, many Native American languages disappeared and with them their culture.

Some American Indian languages are still used today but they are usually spoken by the older members of the tribes who still live on the reservations. In North America there are 150—170 languages that have at least one speaker and many of these languages have under a hundred speakers.

One ancient language which is spoken by the Northern Paiute tribe has more than two hundred speakers. This means when the elders of the tribe get together, they still speak it. But for most of the younger members of the tribe, the everyday language is English.

But the good news is that some of these people are keeping their culture and language alive. They are also receiving help from the National Geographic Society's Enduring Voices Project. The aim of the project is to help languages around the world which are dying out. Linguists and experts meet these 'last speakers'. The team interviews them and they are recorded with video, pictures and audio. They also tell old stories which are written down in English so people can learn more about the culture.

Recording the language and culture is only part of the project. The next stage is to pass on the language to the next generation. Some children pick up some of the language from their parents or grandparents but many tribes also offer courses in the language. The Salish tribe is an excellent example of how schools can help. The tribe lives in the Flathead Reservation in Montana. Their language is currently spoken by about 50 people who are aged over 75 years. No one under 50 speaks the language. So now, the local people have set up a school. It has 30 students aged two to twelve during the day and there are also courses for adults in the evening. It is schools and projects like these which - hopefully - might save languages for the future.
