What is Turkish food?

When you ask "typical Turkish food", most people think about kebab, ayran and baklava. But do they usually eat these? What do Turkish teens eat today? We asked Yasin(14), Hilal (15) and Ahmet(18)

BREAKFAST

Yasin: I like omelette or chips at weekends, but on school days I eat sandwiches or bagels.

Hilal: I often have breakfast with ice-tea and some toast. I don't like eggs.

Ahmet: I prefer cheese, jam, cucumber and tomato for breakfast with some tea.

DINNER

Yasin: It changes. I eat some cookies with juice when my parents away. Once a week we eat hamburger or pizza out all together. We like eating junk food.

Hilal: I'm lucky because my mom cooks yummy food. We eat some soup, salad, rice, fried chicken or fish for dinner. I like pudding, also.

Ahmet: I live in a small neighbourhood with my mother and twin sister. We don't have many restaurants around. But we have a bazaar in front of our house. We buy a lot of vegetables and cook soups, spinach, beans and so on. I help my mum for dinner and I like eating yoghurt after dinner.
