It's 1853. A Native American named George Crum makes the first potato chips. Crum is a chef in an expensive restaurant in Saratoga Springs, New York. One day, a customer doesn't like the French fries. He says they are too thick. So Crum makes more, this time thinner. The customer still doesn't like them. Crum gets mad. He decides to make the customer angry so he cuts the potatoes very, very thin. The customer loves them.

Other people want Crum's potato chips. Now, there is a new food on the menu – SARATOGA CHIPS. Soon Crum opens his own restaurant and he makes his special chips.

It takes a long time to make potato chips. People peel the potatoes by hand. Then, in 1920, the automatic potato peeler changes everything. Now it's faster and easier to make potato chips. Now potato chips aren't a specialty. They are a popular snack food, but only in the North.

A salesman named Herman Lay  wants to sell potato chips in the South.

He sells potato chips in bags  . His business grows. Today, Americans eat a lot of potato chips. Americans spend $ 10.5 million on potato chips every day !
