Ten days, 6,000 km, mountains, desert - and one very old car! It was a journey that these students will never forget.

Yesterday, 2,892 college students finished the 4L Trophy race. It is a competition for 18-28-year-olds to drive from France to Morocco in a Renault 4L - a car from the 1960s, 70s, and 80s. The race started ten days ago, but the real challenge started many months before.

First, the teams needed to pay €9,500 to enter the race and to buy a car. After finding a Renault 4L, the students prepared their cars for the long journey. Then they drove to Biarritz, in the south of France, for the start of the race.

The students traveled through Spain and then took a boat to Morocco. That was the easy part! After they arrived in Morocco, they drove through the Atlas Mountains and across the Sahara Desert. The teams often had to push their cars in the sand.

Finally, they arrived in Marrakesh. Each team took important things in their car for the people of Morocco, like medical and school equipment. In total, the students carried 60 tons of equipment from France to Morocco. What an amazing adventure!
