Harrods is probably the most famous department store in the UK. It's over 150 years old and it has 330 departments on seven floors. On special days, about 300,000 customers come and spend their time and money in Harrods. More than five thousand people from more than fifty different countries work for the store. However, the staff is not just shop assistants. Harrods has its own hairdresser's, doctor's, bank, fire brigade and much more. A huge team of people clean and look after the store. This includes checking and changing the 11,500 light bulbs on the outside of the building. Harrods is very famous for providing "all things, for all people, everywhere." Whatever you want, you can buy it at Harrods – from expensive jewellery and furniture, to paper and pens. Many people come to Harrods just to look and not to buy and this can be a problem. Sometimes the doorman doesn't let people enter because they are wearing the wrong kinds of clothes!
