Once upon a time there is a king. He has a beautiful daughter. Her name is Maggie. They live in a country far, far away. But there is something wrong with her. Every night she changes into an owl and flies away to the fields where she catches mice. She doesn't come back until three o'clock in the morning. Every morning, when she wakes up, her face is covered with feathers and she has a bad feeling that something strange happens to her every night. She knows that only true love can save her from that horrible feeling. So she tells her father to find her a brave husband who likes birds a lot and doesn't like bad people. So he sends out messengers to find a nice young man who especially likes night birds. So the messenger who goes north finds a handsome young man who lives deep in the forest and who has an owl for a friend. He brings him to the king and the king asks him three questions …
