King's Manor Secondary School

My name is Dan, and I go to King's Manor Secondary School in North London. There are five classes every day. We start at half past eight, and our first class in the morning is Personal, Health and Social Education (PHSE). We study this subject with our class tutor, Mr Andrews. We finish school at three o'clock, but I do homework every day, normally for about half an hour.

The food in the canteen isn't great. Today it's curry – yuk! I prefer sandwiches, and there are also machines if you want drinks, crisps or chocolate.

The rules here are strict and sometimes the head teacher excludes a bad student from school for one or two days. The uniform is obligatory, but I think it's OK, except the blue and yellow tie!

Our school subjects aren't very exciting. At my friend's school they study graphic design, food technology and drama. I think those are really interesting subjects.
