Reading Comprehension: The Farmer and the Eagle

A farmer once caught an eagle. He did not keep it. He let it go.

"You are a beautiful bird," he said. "I don't want to kill you. Fly away." Eagles cannot speak but the big bird thought, "Thank you very much. You are a good man."

Some days later, the farmer worked hard all one morning. Then he had his lunch and went to sleep in the hot sun. There was a wall of big stones behind him. The farmer had a hat on his head. He did not see the eagle in the sky but the eagle saw him. The eagle saw the wall, too.

Then the eagle flew down and took off the farmer's hat. It put the hat on the grass in front of the farmer. He woke up and shouted at the eagle, "What are you doing? Where are you taking my hat? I was good to you. I let you go and now you are stealing my hat. Give it to me."

He walked to the hat but the eagle picked it up and put it down three metres away. The farmer ran after it. Then he heard a loud noise. He looked back and saw the wall. It fell down. The farmer picked up his hat and put it on his head.

"Thank you," he said to the eagle and the eagle flew away.
