Two men                    travelling in a very wild part of America. They saw no modern houses and no traces of civilization for                    days.

One day they met an old Indian who hunted animals. He was very                    and knew everything about the forest and the animals living in it. He could also                    English quite well.

“Can you tell us what the weather                    be like during the next few days?” one of the two                    asked him. “Oh, yes,” he said. “There will be snow for a day or two, but then the sunshine will come again and the weather will be fine.”

“These old Indians seem                    more about Nature we with all our science,” said the man to his friend. Then he turned to the old Indian.

“Tell me,” he said, “how do you know all that?”

The Indian answered, “I heard it on the radio.”
