During my last training period, from Tuesday to Saturday, I usually at 7 o'clock. I a quick breakfast. Then, after a shower, I to the bus stop for ten minutes. Then I the bus. It me fifty minutes to get to the computer shop. I usually at five to nine. Mr Townsend, the boss, the shop at nine. My colleagues, Paul and Harry, at the same time. We a coffee and we got dressed quickly. We a nice shirt with the company's logotype on the chest and a badge with our names on it. I a real professional.

Most of the time, the job easy. But sometimes it difficult. We all sorts of customers. We to them, we to understand what they (and they all needed different things). We often softwares, we often computers. Sometimes I advice and I even occasionally devices like printers or scanners. That really interesting and motivating.

I didn't do any welding, so I had to wear no safety equipment. But my boss goggles when he soldered computer parts like chips.

I a break in the morning, around 11 a.m. Then I lunch at half past twelve. I back to work at two and then I at six.

I home at seven. I had a chat with my family and then I a few notes about my working day. Then we dinner at eight. I to watch a quick film but I felt so sleepy that I quickly to bed.
