Harry and the difficult questions

Harry Doors loved learning. He had hundreds of books in his room at home and liked using the computer at school to find out about jungles, clouds, kangaroos or anything else that he found interesting.

One day Harry's teacher said, 'Would you like to be on a TV programme, Harry? It's a competition for the cleverest children in the country. You'll have to answer lots of difficult questions!' Harry said, 'Yes! Of course!'

The next day, a man called Mr Silver came to Harry's school to talk to him about the competition. 'Before we can film you, Harry,' he said, 'I have three quick questions for you. Ready?' 'Yes!' Harry whispered. He was a little afraid!

'Good! Where's the River Thames?' 'In London,' Harry said quietly.

'Well done! What's 27 times 5?' '135!' Harry answered quickly.

'Great! Which is the highest mountain in the world?' 'Mount Everest and it's 8,848 metres high!' Harry answered with a big smile on his face. He knew that all his answers were right.

'Excellent!' the man said. 'You're clever enough for the competition next Tuesday. A taxi will bring you and your parents to Television House at six o'clock! Now, I just need to know your age. When's your birthday, Harry?' Harry was so excited he couldn't speak. 'Sorry!' he said. 'I've forgotten!'

4.- Read the article about Young Designers. Answer the questions below.

The competition started in 2008 and more than 4,000 teenagers enter it every year. Rode Steadman organises the competition. "I have a fantastic job. Every year, I meet a lot of very clever teenagers with great ideas. For example, last year, a girl in Norfolk made a solar powered cold bag for food. The year before, a boy from Devon designed a recycled wood toy box for young children."

The first winner was Jason Owen. In 2009, when he was fourteen, Jason designed and made a picnic bag –for a dog! Jason explained where his idea came from. "My dad can't see so he has a guide dog. I made the first bag with denim from some old jeans but now they are nylon – it's easier to clean. I designed them for working dogs but now people buy them for their family pets. It was really exciting when I won. It gave me a lot of confidence and the prize money was very useful! I used it to advertise the pet picnic bag."

Lola Bennett was the winner in 2010. She wanted to practise speaking Spanish but she was worried about just looking on the Internet and using social networking sites. Her answer to the problem? She designed a language exchange website for students all over the world. Lola says, "I started the website when I was fourteen and now there are 750,000 members. I designed it for students aged thirteen to sixteen and it's a safe social networking site."

Brother and sister Leanne and Jacob Nelson also invented something to solve a problem. Their great-grandmother couldn't use a computer mouse because her hands were too old. "The mouse was very uncomfortable for her. It was too small. We designed a cover so she could use it easily. We made it with some foam from an old bed. A computer company bought the idea from us a year ago. Now we're thinking about what we can do next to help her and other old people use technology."
