

Are celebrities bad for you?

Celebrities are everywhere nowadays: on TV, in magazines, online. Is this preoccupation with _____ (fame) people harmless fun or is it bad for us? How many people are _____ (true) obsessed with modern media idols? And on the other side of the coin, can fame be _____ (harm) to the celebrities?

Studies suggest that the vast _____ (major) of teenagers do not really worship celebrities. Researchers have identified three kinds of fans. About 15% of young people have an '_____ (entertain)-social' interest. They love _____ (chat) about their favourite celebrities with friends and this does not appear to do any harm.

Another 5% feel that they have an 'intense-personal' _____ (relation) with a celebrity. Sometimes they see them as their soulmate and find that they are often thinking about them, even when they don't want to. These people are more at risk from depression and _____ (anxious). If girls in this group idolise a female star with a body they consider to be perfect, they are more likely to be unhappy with their own bodies.

That leaves 2% of young people with a 'borderline-pathological' interest. They might say, for example, they would spend several thousand pounds on a paper plate the celebrity had used, or that they would do something _____ (legal) if the celebrity asked them to. These people are in most danger of being _____ (serious) disturbed.

What about the celebrities _____ (they)? A study in the USA tried to measure narcissism or extreme self-_____ (centre), when feelings of _____ (worth) and _____ (visibility) are compensated for by _____ (turn) into the opposite: excessive showing off. Researchers looked at 200 celebrities, 200 young adults with Masters in Business Administration (a group known for being narcissistic) and a _____ (nation) representative sample using the same questionnaire. As was expected, the celebrities were significantly more narcissistic than the MBAs and both groups were a lot more narcissistic than the general _____ (populate).

Four kinds of celebrity were _____ (include) in the sample. The most narcissistic were the ones who had become famous through reality TV shows – they scored highest on vanity and _____ (willing) to exploit other people. Next came comedians, who scored highest on exhibitionism and feelings of superiority. Then came actors, and the _____ (little) narcissistic were musicians. One interesting result was that there was no _____ (connect) between narcissism and the _____ (long) of time the celebrity had been famous. This means that becoming famous probably did not make the celebrities narcissistic – they already were beforehand.

So, what can we learn from this? People who are very _____ (success) or famous tend to be narcissists and are liable to be ruthless, self-seeking workaholics. As we can see from celebrity magazines, they are also often desperate and lonely. They make disastrous role models.