1 Brad Pitt has everything. He's the star of blockbusting films such as Fight Club, Ocean's Eleven and Troy. He's the husband of superstar actress Angelina Jolie. He's a father, he's handsome and he's very, very rich. But now, Brad is doing something completely different. He's helping a whole community.

2 The famous couple live in the French Quarter of New Orleans in an 1830s mansion. They bought the house in 2007 while Pitt was filming The Curious Case of Benjamin Button. The house which is worth more than $3 million is amazing. It has a grand spiral staircase, a lift, a huge kitchen, a large private courtyard and a separate two-floor guesthouse. It also has private parking for two cars which is a luxury in the French Quarter.

3 However, Brad Pitt has another interest in New Orleans. After Hurricane Katrina hit New Orleans in 2005, thousands of homes were destroyed in the flooding. When Brad Pitt visited the area he was shocked by what he saw and he decided to do something about it.

4 Brad wanted to build new, eco-friendly homes that would be safe in times of flooding. He started by working with a group called Global Green. They organised an architecture competition to find the best ideas. Then, Pitt formed a new organisation called the Make It Right Foundation.

5 The organisation was a success and already many new homes have been built. The houses are on stilts and stand at least five feet above the ground. The windows and doors are made with a special material to make them strong against the wind.

6 The homes also have solar panels, excellent insulation and many other environmentally friendly features. So, not only are the homes safe, new and modern, they also help cut energy bills by at least 75%.

7 But are they really safe against the storms? In August 2008, when the homes were nearly finished, a hurricane tested their strength. Hurricane Gustav hit New Orleans with 115 mph winds. Luckily the houses proved to be so strong, not one pane of glass broke during the storm.

So, who are the greenest celebrities in Hollywood? Brad Pitt is certainly one of them.

- A Helping to make life cheaper
- B Surviving the storm
- C Buying a dream home
- D Leaving New Orleans
- E A terrible disaster
- F Beginning the project
- G A successful career
- H Built for bad weather
