Read the following text carefully!

Fishes are animals living in water. Fishes have fins that help them to swim. Most fishes have slimy skins covered with scales which are very small and can hardly be seen.

Fishes breathe through gills. These look like a comb and lie on each side of the head. Fishes take in water all the time. The water flows in through the mouth over the gills and through the sides of the head. When a fish takes in water it is not drinking but breathing and the gills absorb oxygen from the water.

The body of a fish is made up of the head, the trunk, and the tail fins. There are many different shapes and colors. Some fishes are long and thin while others are flat. Some fishes have bodies which are broad at the trunk region and narrow towards the head and tail.
