Mary Anderson

The inventor of the first window wipers for a car was Mary Anderson. In the 1880s, Mary visited New York City and took a ride on a streetcar during stormy weather. She noticed that the driver had to get off the streetcar to clean his window. That must have made the driver angry. It gave Mary the idea for her invention. She designed wipers that a driver could control from inside a car. Mary Anderson got the rights to her invention in 1905.
