THE ANT AND THE DOVE

One day an ant goes to a river to drink and falls into the water. The poor ant cannot get out of the water and cries, "Oh, help me! Oh, save me!"

A dove is flying high in the sky holding a little stick in the beak. When she sees the poor little ant in the river she wants to help the ant. She drops the stick into the water and the ant gets on the stick. Then the ant gets out of the river.

Some days later a hunter puts up a net in the grass and the dove falls into the net. The hunter wants to close the net and catch the dove. The dove cannot get out of the net and cries for help. The ant hears the dove's cry for help and runs up to help him. He sees the hunter who wants to close the dove in the net. The ant gets on the hunter's neck and bites him. The hunter drops the net because he wants to catch the ant on his neck. The dove gets out of the net and flies away.
