Green living means making your house environmentally friendly. There are places in the world where green living is very popular.

This unusual hill in the photo is in California, USA. It is a roof of a house, and those round things are its windows. They are called skylights. They let lots of natural light into the house so the people living there don't have to turn on lights during the day. This means they use less electricity. The house is underground. The grass on its roof keeps the house warm in winter and cool in summer. The people don't have to turn on the heating.

Green living is also popular in Germany. Look at the house in the other photo. It is a traditional style German house, but the roof looks a bit different. There are lots of solar panels. What do they do? Well, they absorb energy from sunlight and change it into heat and electricity. You can power your house and heat your water with sunlight. It is free, and it isn't bad for the environment.

- Windows in a roof are called skylights. ?
- It is very dark inside the underground house. ?
- You have to heat underground houses more. ?
- Solar panels make power from the sun. ?
- Solar energy is free. ?
