I. Read the text below and complete the following tasks.

After our trip to Canada, we went to see the Amish people, who live without electricity and cars. _____. Standing on the side of the road, you don't hear cars or motorcycles; you hear whinnying horses and the clop-clop of their hooves. When I experienced a little bit of their lifestyle, I was amazed that such a way of living was possible.

Traffic, car horns, taxis, more traffic, more car horns and more taxis. We weren't in Amish country anymore: this was Chicago! We had already seen the outskirts during our train ride into the city. _____. Was this Chicago? Thankfully the train continued towards the graffiti covered houses of the slums. Was this Chicago? I was glad that the train still kept going. A little later, the train went into a tunnel, then stopped in a building, two floors below ground level. Was this Chicago? A dark train station with crowd of people hurrying all over? _____. Yes! This was Chicago! For the next fifteen minutes, all we did was look up at the skyscrapers all around us. They were huge! Then we went up to the 103rd floor of the tallest one of all: the Sears Tower. _____. From that height we had an awesome view, looking down onto the other skyscrapers.
