My favourite film

Rafa

The first time I saw Silver River was at my friend's house. It's the story of two families, which didn't sound very interesting to me, but actually I loved it. I saw it again last week, and I enjoyed it just as much. The actors are good and so is the story, but what I really love is the music – it's brilliant. When the film first came out, not many people went to see it, but it's a lot more popular now.

Dan

For me, Forest Path is the best film ever. It's about a musician who leaves his home in Mexico and goes looking for adventure. He travels around the country for a year, playing his guitar everywhere he goes. At the end of the film, he meets the woman who becomes his wife. This actually happened in real life many years ago, which I didn't know when I first saw it. The acting is very good, especially the woman – she has more acting experience than the man.

Claudio

I can't remember when or where I first saw Black Hole, but it's a film I like to watch at least once a year. It's about travelling through space, and to me the acting and the story are not important – it's the way it's filmed. It's like a dream and nothing seems real. At the time, this was a new way of making films and since then lots of people have copied the idea. The music is very beautiful, and the final moments always make me cry.

PART 3

QUESTIONS 14–18

For each question, choose the correct answer.

My life as a tour guide

Kerri Benson talks about the job she loves.

I was looking for work after I finished university when a friend of mine told me about her fantastic job as a tour guide. She was able to help me get a job with her company and now, every two weeks, a driver and I take a group of tourists across five European countries by coach.

Before each tour, the driver takes the coach from the city where the last tour finished to the one where the next tour starts, but I fly there. When I get to the hotel, I make sure I have all the right forms and visas for the new group of tourists. It's important that I have everything.

I'm friendly towards the tourists, but I always remember that they're my customers. There's no boss to help with problems, which can be difficult, but I love it when our coach is full of happy people, excited about their trip.

The company has a website for all of the tour guides to share information. Some post information about journey times, but that changes so quickly it's not very useful. My posts are usually about interesting museums, castles and things like that. And I read other guides' ideas for restaurants to take customers to.

This is a job for people who enjoy travelling and planning. If you're thinking of doing it, go on a tour as a customer first. It's a good way to see what guides do. Just remember that guides don't get paid much. For me, that's not a problem, but it might be for some people.

- 14 What does Kerri say about becoming a tour guide?
- A She took the job because she couldn't find anything better.
 - B She needed a job that she could do in her university holidays.
 - C She got the job because she knew someone at the company.
- 15 Before each tour, Kerri
- A drives to the place where the tour will start.
 - B checks that she has the documents she needs.
 - C makes sure that enough hotel rooms are booked.
- 16 What does Kerri enjoy about her job?
- A seeing people having a good holiday
 - B meeting people who become friends
 - C helping people with problems
- 17 Kerri gives other tour guides information about
- A where to eat.
 - B places to visit.
 - C traffic problems.
- 18 What advice does Kerri have for people who want to do her job?
- A Take a tour to see if you like it.
 - B Talk to people who are already guides.
 - C Find a company that pays guides well.
