Beautiful Photos

I think the real beauty of a photograph is the memory it stands for. I mean, as soon as you look at pictures, they stir up thoughts and feelings that can take you back to long-forgotten places. ¹ And you can end up feeling really happy because of that. I mainly use my smartphone for taking photos and, to be honest, most of them just end up staying on my phone or laptop. ² I'm not great at organizing them all. Some of them do move a step further and get used in my blog. The photos I take are mostly OK. But, you see, I'm one of those people who has to be the best at anything I turn my hand to. ³ So, as far as I'm concerned, 'OK' isn't really good enough when it comes to photography. As a result, I've decided to sign up for a self-study course written by award-winning photographer Amy Gault, which I hope will take me through the steps I need to become a bit more accomplished, and blurred out-of-focus shots will become a thing of the past. ⁴ Under her guidance, I hope to become a little more expert soon. The first module is about composition and framing.
