When I was growing up, there were four people in my immediate family – me, my parents, and my younger brother. My parents wanted us to spend time as a family, so we used to eat dinner at home together several times a week. But there was a problem. My parents both worked full-time and didn't usually feel like cooking when they came home at night.

So we thought of a solution. My whole family would plan the next week's meals and go shopping for food on the weekend. Then I would cook dinner for the family a couple of times a week. (That was fine with me because I wanted to learn more about cooking anyway.)

When we started this new plan, I made really easy dishes. For example, I would just put a frozen dinner in the oven and make a salad. But I got bored with that pretty quickly, so I started to read cookbooks and try different recipes. After a while, I even made up some of my own recipes – and they were delicious! Everybody loved it when it was my turn to cook.
