Reading

11 Read the online forum about celebrations.

Sophie	I just love any public holiday – or bank holiday, as they're called in my country. It means the weekend is extra long, so everyone's relaxed, and we always go somewhere different each time – it's a family tradition. We go and explore a bit more of our local area, say, or visit a museum, or see a film. I'm never bored!
Mark	One day we celebrate in my country is April Fool's Day! People go around playing jokes on all their friends – but it's not cool when my friends do it to me! My dad doesn't enjoy the day, either – there's always a story in the paper that isn't really true, and he hates trying to guess which one it is!
Julia	I love birthdays but I guess that's because I'm only fifteen. Mum and Dad hate them! It's just really nice to wake up and get lots of lovely treats. Mum always makes my favourite breakfast and if it's a weekend we go out somewhere nice for the day. I usually can't sleep the night before!
Liam	I don't really do anything for Halloween but a lot of the kids in the street dress up and go out 'trick or treating' in the evenings. I don't do that, though. It's just not interesting at all. So I sit at home and watch TV – that's a far better way to spend the evening!
Helen	I think Valentine's Day is really great – everyone gets cards and tries to guess who they're from because they're not signed. I don't usually get any cards, so my face goes red every time anyone asks me! But I guess I don't mind, really! And maybe I'll get a really nice one next year!
Deborah	Every year on New Year's Eve my family decide to have a party. We're always exhausted afterwards! There are often over 60 people in the house and Mum's always worried that there isn't enough food or drink so she doesn't relax at all. Of course it's fine in the end – but we're not going to do it again next year!

Are the sentences True (T) or False (F)?
