Help in Hospitals

Melinda works with sick children. She visits children in hospitals. She isn't a nurse or a doctor. She's a playworker. A playworker plays fun games with children or takes children to special places, such as farms. Her job is to make the children happy. The children smile and laugh with Melinda.

Gareth works in hospitals, too. He also works with athletes in professional sports clubs. He sometimes goes to people's homes. Gareth is a physiotherapist. A physiotherapist helps people with an injury. He asks people to do exercises with their body. The exercises help people get better or play sports better.

athlete (noun): a person who is trained in sports

fun (adjective): enjoyable
