6 In the end, the dog lost his bone.

The moral of the story

For thousands of years, parents and teachers have used fairy tales and fables to teach children important life lessons. Here are two examples that you may know.

The ugly duckling

by Hans Christian Andersen

Some time ago, a mother duck was taking care of her eggs and she noticed most of her eggs were white, but one was large and gray. When the ducklings were born, there was one who looked very different and was bigger than his brothers and sisters. All the ducks called him names and didn't let him join their games, so he left and went away on his own. He spoke to other birds, but nobody wanted to be his friend because he wasn't like them. One day, he looked in the water and saw that he was tall, strong, and had white feathers. A short time later he saw other birds that looked like him. He discovered that they were swans and that he was a swan, too. He had finally found birds who wanted to be his friends.

The dog and his reflection

from Aesop's Fables

Once upon a time there was a hungry dog. He went to the market and waited outside the butcher's shop. At the end of the day, the assistant took out the trash cans. They were full of delicious bones. As soon as the dog was alone, he found the biggest bone and ran out of town. After a while, the dog came to a bridge. When he was crossing, he looked into the water and saw another dog. It had a really big bone, with lots of meat on it. Without thinking, the dog dropped his bone and jumped into the river and tried to get the second bone. He realized there was no other dog—he had seen himself in the water. When he got out of the water, it was too late. He had lost his bone.
