2. Read the passage and choose the correct option to answer the questions. (1.5 points)

I was raised to believe that we are all responsible for each other in this world. I think of every person as my neighbour. I'll recognize that some neither people I meet are neither individuals I neither like nor feel like helping, but it is still my responsibility to reach out if they need help. Sometimes, helping others is easy, as it was last week when I helped my niece with her homework. It's not so easy when people are suffering from problems that never should have occurred. For example, most people know the consequences of abusing drugs or alcohol, yet many who receive help at public and private agencies are addicted to these substances. When I first started volunteering at the Center for Family Problems, I was amazed to learn how many people are surrounded by problems that their addictions have caused. I couldn't imagine doing some of the things that the Center's clients had done. However, I soon realized that addicts are just people who exceed their limits and end up in trouble. With this in mind, I was able to proceed to the next step: helping them overcome their addiction. I have gotten used to accepting people as they are and helping them in the best way I can.
