

SUBJECT-VERB INVERSION IN CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

Change the sentences according to the example:

If she had studied more, she would have answered the teacher's questions.

Had she studied more, she would have answered the teacher's questions.

1. If she hadn't been so absent-minded, she wouldn't have failed her test.
2. If the meeting hadn't been so long-winded, I would have got there on time.
3. If Larry had impressed his boss, he would have been hired.
4. If he had worked for me, he would have gotten promoted.
5. If they had worked off their debts, they wouldn't have had so many worries.
6. If you had worked on your project all night, you would have finished it.
7. If he hadn't talked behind my back, he would still be my friend.
8. If the professor had stuck to the point, the class wouldn't have lasted hours.
9. If things hadn't been up in the air, we could have made the right decisions.
10. If you are under the weather today, you might not be happy with the news.
11. If you are looking for a high-achiever, I am the person you need.
12. If he is a cold-blooded murderer, he ought to get the death penalty.
13. If the government encourages mass vaccination, the death toll will decrease.