SAMPLE 1:

In the present world, the advancement of technology such as the internet and online communication has reduced the gap between different continents considerably. Hence, I strongly agree with the view that the internet has made the world smaller / brought people closer. I believe that the progress in the internet technology has made international communication much easier than ever before.

To begin with, the method of talking with people is becoming much more efficient and quicker due to the internet nowadays. For instance, the geographical barrier between continents has reduced to a great extent because of the internet. A person from the USA can easily chat with his loved ones in India due to the invention of technology. What's more, they can do this anytime and from anywhere with a few taps on their phone or computer. In addition, there are many great social media platforms such as Facebook or WhatsApp messenger through which one is able to make not only voice call but also real-time face video chat. In other words, people do not feel apart from each other even if they are living abroad. This is not possible without the internet technology.

Furthermore, the development of business has become quite/more flexible and convenient not only for vendors but also for traders. This is possible because the internet has provided a much faster route to communicate between customers and vendors. For example, the trader can simply talk with his vendors for his business by using the electronic mail or Skype. Better still, they do not have to travel or meet in person to close a business deal. Thus, the internet saves time and money for both of them as they do not need to spend on travel or accommodation expenses which they might have to incur if they had met face to face.

In conclusion, the internet has greatly reduced the communication barrier between the people on the earth. This, in turn, has facilitated effective and efficient chat between not only relatives who live thousands of miles apart but also businessmen. In fact, this flexibility will be helpful for a nation to expand trade globally and thus boost the economy.

SAMPLE 2:

There is no doubt that the internet has an immense influence on the people over the last few years. Technological advancements also contribute a lot in widespread usage of this technology. Some people argue that the internet provides fast, reliable and cheapest ways of communications. Others state that people become isolated and disconnected because of excessive use of the internet. I believe that the internet has undeniable benefits and it helps people to link with each other.

The Internet provides different ways of communications, which are highly reliable and adoptable. Before the advent of the internet, people used other media of communication such as letters, phone calls etc. which cost them handsome amount and time. However, the internet gradually changed the ways the people communicate. Nowadays, everyone has mobile, laptop, tablet etc. and these devices are equipped with the internet that makes them in touch with their peer group using social networking applications.

It is often seen that people are becoming unsocial due to the internet. They are relying more on technology than their friends and relatives. They consider communicating over the internet is sufficient and do not like to bother meeting each other. Sometimes individuals living in same premises prefer to talk using cell phones and electronic gadgets rather than talking directly.

Because of the internet we can talk and keep in touch with people which might have been impossible otherwise. The professional and business communication greatly depends on the internet and because of the widespread usages of the internet, we can stay in touch with people we care.

To sum up, I believe that advantages of internet outweigh its disadvantages. The Internet makes this world as a global village by removing the barrier of distance. Economical ways of communication advocate people to talk more freely without worrying about cost. According to a recent survey, about 70 percent of the world is using the internet for communication. This survey justifies the importance of the internet in our lives.

SAMPLE 3:

In today's world _ due to the advancement of technology new inventions are coming into existence. It is true that 'Necessity is a mother of invention'. _ Internet is just like a wonder box, which contains every type of information. Besides it has also proved as a very important tool to connect people with one another.

In today's modernized era nobody has sufficient time to write letters to their loved ones. Moreover it also takes longer to send or receive any information. But the Internet is the easiest way to send messages to our loved ones. Communication can be either in the form of e-mail or through text messages sent via internet to mobile phones. We can send and receive messages straight way.

In other hand today's young generation mostly prefers to do chatting through the Internet. During such chatting we can write messages and get replies straight away. Moreover voice chatting is going to be very popular day-by-day.

As it is a reality the advantages and disadvantages resemble two sides of one coin, which usually runs parallel. So like other things internet also have some downsides, like causing people health problems for example, poor eye-sight, back ache or migraines. Today's teenagers usually prefer to spend their time on the internet rather than to participating in other physical activities, which causing them to have a weaker physical health.

To conclude, I would like to say that the Internet is one of the most modernized and most successful tools, not only for communication, even to get most relevant information regarding every field in a very short period of time.
