

SHRIMP THE BEST Word formation

Red Nose Day is one of Britain's most events, raising money for good causes. It is organised by the charity Comic Relief and takes place in March. Many well-known take part, as well as actors, musicians, TV personalities and other celebrities. One year, the singer Jessie J shaved off all her hair and raised a sum of money by doing that.

In addition to a great evening's on TV on the day itself, there are many programmes and live events in the weeks leading up to Red Nose Day. At schools and colleges, students do silly things for cash, like sitting in a bath full of cold baked beans! Many workplaces organise stunts and donate money. Shops and supermarkets sell the famous red noses and other such as red hair dye and badges.

Through short documentary films, TV learn how the money raised in previous years has helped Comic Relief to make a real to people in need, both in Britain and in Africa. Some of the stories shown are shocking, but the message is always a positive one and there are many happy . Comic Relief has achieved a great deal by making people laugh.
