LOSE YOUR ARM OR LOSE YOUR LIFE

Aron Ralston is an experienced climber and he went to Blue John Canyon for hiking in April 2003. He was alone and he made two big mistakes: he didn't tell anybody where he was and he didn't have a mobile phone with him. Aron climbed a narrow gap between the walls of the canyon. Suddenly a large rock fell on his right arm. He tried to pull his arm out but he couldn't. He understood that he was in trouble. He couldn't phone somebody and he didn't have enough food or water with him.

First, he tried to move the rock. Then, he tried to break the rock with his knife. But nothing worked. He had a camera with him and he recorded himself every day. After five days, he had no more water and he felt very weak and ill. He couldn't feel his hand. He made a difficult decision. He broke the bone in his arm with his knife.

Finally, he was free but he was away. He started to walk through the canyon and met some hikers. They helped him and a helicopter came to rescue him. He lost his arm but he is still alive!
