

Read the description of different festivals and fill in the gaps with the words from the box:

harbour   blast   bask in   knees-up   ignites   indulging

Holi, India

Otherwise known as the ‘Festival of Colour’, it’s a Hindu festival that’s about forgetting all resentment and banishing any bad feelings you might _____ toward your fellow humans. This festival is hyped for a good reason – the excitement lasts for days as the locals shower each other with paint and coloured water, eat amazing food and generally have a _____.

Burning Man, the USA

Nestled within the barren Black Rock Desert of Nevada, lies a one-of-a-kind festival that captivates all who attend. From flamboyant costumes to intricate rituals like the fiery burning of colossal wooden sculptures, it offers an unparalleled experience that _____ the soul and shatters boundaries. The festival spans eight days, each filled with opportunities to express yourself creatively, forge connections within the community, and _____ the awe-inspiring art installations.

Oktoberfest, Germany

This awesome German festival is one of the most popular autumn celebrations around the world. It revolves around _____ in some of the local brews. If you’re a teetotaler, you can still join the _____ to enjoy the traditional foods: German breads and sausages and other local delicacies that go well with the golden drinks.