

BUILDING BONDS: SHARED RESPONSIBILITIES IN FAMILY LIFE

Family life is changing, and sharing household chores is a key part of it. It's not just about who brings in the money or takes care of the house – it's about everyone playing a role in making the home a happy place.

When sharing household chores, everyone feels like they're a part of something important and it helps the family run smoothly. We're not only doing chores; we're growing and learning together.

Doing things like cooking or cleaning as a team also helps strengthen the family bond. It's a chance to talk, laugh, and understand each other better. Families that work together build stronger connections and make the home a more enjoyable place.

The old idea of one person being the breadwinner and another the homemaker is changing. Families now understand that when everyone helps out, it creates a more balanced and happy life. Each person has something valuable to contribute, it helps young people learn to take on responsibility.

After all, a happy home is a home where everyone contributes and cares for one another.

Answer the questions below.

What do people feel when sharing household chores?

What is the effect of doing things like cooking and cleaning have on families?

What young people learn when they share the household chores with their parents?

Decide if the statements is True for False.

Statements	T	F
A family must have one person being the breadwinner and another the homemaker is changing.
Home should be a happy and enjoyable place.
Doing household chores is not beneficial for young people.
A happy home is a home where everyone takes care of each other.		