An Indoor Sport

James Naismith invented the game of basketball. He was a Physical Education teacher from Canada who went to Springfield, Massachusetts, in 1890 to teach at a college there. James Naismith wanted his students to have an indoor sport to play during the winter. By 1891, he had invented basketball. In his early game, players bounced a soccer ball and tried to throw it into a peach basket. Unlike the baskets used today, the peach basket was not open at the bottom. Basketball was first played in the Olympics in 1936. James Naismith was thrilled to be there to watch the game he invented.

Raisins

Dark, chewy, sweet raisins are a popular snack. Did you know that all raisins start out as grapes? Here's how they make the journey from grape to raisin. First, bunches of ripe grapes are cut from their vines. Next, the grapes are laid on paper trays to dry in the sun. They usually dry for two to three weeks. After that, the raisins are sent across a shaker that gets rid of dirt and rocks. Finally, the raisins are washed and put into boxes or bags.
