STRANGE SPORTS

I When thinking about popular sports games and competitions, we usually think about sports that are well-known to most people. Among them are soccer, basketball, swimming and athletics. However, there are also sports that are much less well-known. These sports are sometimes extreme 5 or, at the very least, strange.

II While many of you have probably heard about field hockey and ice hockey, how many have heard about underwater hockey? This game is played underwater and the players wear diving equipment, which includes fins, a diving mask and a snorkel. They hit the disk with a stick, just as they do in 10 ice hockey. Although it is played in small swimming pools and the number of fans that can watch a game in real time is limited, it still has many fans in different parts of the world.

III “Dog surfing” is another strange sport. It started in California, a state that is well-known for its beaches and surfers. The goal of this sport is exactly the 15 same as that of regular surfing. However, in dog surfing, both the dog and its owner have to stay on a surfboard while catching the waves. Dog surfing competitions are held in California every year and they attract people from all over America.

IV Strange sports, however, can also be found on land. For example, in chess
20 boxing competitions, held indoors, participants have to be good at both chess and boxing. In every game of chess, the participant has to use his brain to play the game. Then, in every round of boxing, he can take a break from the mental effort of playing chess and do something physical. Fans enjoy watching this sport because it involves a combination of brains and muscles.

V There is also zorbing, which has been around since the mid-1990s, and is done
25 outdoors. All the participants have to do is to climb into a huge plastic ball and roll down a hill as it moves faster and faster. This sport is becoming more popular with new versions like snow zorbing and football zorbing. Thinking out of the box is the name of the game.
