Webcams Make Alaska Bears Accessible

A new video initiative is bringing the famed brown bear of Alaska's Katmai National Park directly to computers and smartphones.

Without having to go there, you'll be able to watch mature bears compete for salmon at Brook Falls and other sites and cubs tumbling over each other as they play. Starting Tuesday, a live we stream (http://is.gd/bfPAs8) will allow the public to log on and see the brown bears in their natural habitat.

The project is a partnership with explor.org, which set up four high-definition cameras in Katmai, spokesman Jason Damata told The Associated Press. Three of them are at exsisting viewing stands where bear fans come to watch the animals.

"It takes a lot of time, a lot of effort and a lot of money, and the webcams will make it accessible to anyone with with access to a computer, a smartphone, a tablet device," Wood said

BIRDS

Birds are kind of vertebrate animals. Most birds have feathers and wings but not all of them can fly. Birds do not have teeth, but they have a hard beak. The use the beak to pick up food.

The food they eat gives them energy so that they have power to fly. When birds fly they make different kinds of movements, sometimes by gidding with their wings held still or by flappin their wings up and down.

Unlike human, birds do not give birth to babies but they lay eggs. After laying eggs, a mother bird sits on the eggs to keep them warm until they hatch.

Birds spend most of their time looking for food using their keen eyesight. They use their claws and beaks to get bugs, worms, small mammals, fish, fruits, grain and nectar. Although birds eat different kind of food, most of them feed on insect. Those that eat insects are called insectivores
