Las bodas en Argentina

Lee atentamente este artículo acerca de las costumbres de una boda argentina, probablemente muy similares a las de otros países. Completa luego los dos ejercicios de lecto-comprensión.

In Argentina, as in most countries all over the world, before a man and a woman get married, they usually date each other. That's no surprise, of course, but this article will help you learn a lot of new words.

And when they decide to get engaged, they send announcements to their friends and the couple usually offers a small party. During this intimate ceremony a ring is given and worn as a sign of betrothal (a mutual promise to marry). The woman who is engaged to be married is called a bride-to-be or a fiancée. And the man is called a groom-to-be or a fiancé.

When the time of thinking about marriage comes, the woman's female friends often give her a bridal shower and the man's male friends throw a bachelor party, usually at tea-rooms or restaurants. Bachelor parties are stag meetings - for men only - held on the night before he is married. And many tricks are generally prepared to play on the bachelor himself.

The marriage is the formal event performed at the local Registry Office. The social event at which the ceremony of marriage is performed is called wedding often held in a church or temple. The woman is then called a bride and the man, a groom. Relatives and friends start buying wedding presents, usually from a specialized store which the couple has selected carefully.

For the wedding ceremony, the bride usually wears a bridal gown or wedding dress together with a bridal wreath, a bouquet made of delicate small white flowers. A bridesmaid attends the bride at a wedding and the bride's father escorts her. The groom wears a tuxedo or a dark suit and his mother escorts him. During the ceremony, a plain gold wedding ring is given to the bride and sometimes another one is given to the groom.

There is a traditional reception, a formal party held after the ceremony. Abundant food and a special bridecake -a rich cake with several tiers and covered with frosting and decorations- is generally served. After the wedding reception, the couple usually goes on their honeymoon. They usually leave before the guests do, and they usually change into everyday clothes before leaving.

Although newlyweds - as newly married couples are called in the US- like to be alone, after they come back from their honeymoon many of them have to live with their relatives (Oh, home sweet home!!). They can only live in a place of their own when they have enough money to pay for it. But that's another story ...
