We Have All Kinds of Books!

Sam marched up to the library desk. "I really need a book," he said to the librarian.

"We have all kinds of books here," said the librarian. "This is the biggest library in town. Did you want an exciting adventure story? Or perhaps a fantasy?"

Sam shook his head. "No, what I ne—"

"—Something nonfiction?" interrupted the librarian. "A book on history, or maybe a book on music or math?"

"No, what I—"

"I've got it!" said the librarian with a huge smile. "Science fiction? A famous novel? Something popular?"

Sam shook his head again. "No, what I really need is a dictionary."

A Read and choose.

1 The author wrote this story to try to make the reader …

a. frightened. b. sad. (c.) laugh.

2 What is the subject of the first nonfiction book the librarian offers?

a. history b. music c. math

3 In the story, the word interrupted means the same as …

a. stopped him talking. b. shouted at him. c. laughed at him.

4 What word describes the librarian's smile?

a. tiny b. scary c. huge

5 Which of these does the librarian not suggest?

a. a fantasy b. a famous novel c. a biography

6 Looking at the picture, how do you think the librarian feels at the end of the story?

a. happy b. angry c. surprised

/10

LIVEWORKSHEETS