[Interviewer (I): Sarah Johnson, Admissions Officer at Prestige University]

[Interviewee (E): Alex Rodriguez, Applicant for Economics Major]

I: Good morning, Alex. Thank you for joining us today. How are you feeling?

E: Good morning, Sarah. I'm doing well, thank you. I'm excited to be here and learn more about Prestige University.

I: Excellent. Let's start by discussing your academic interests and why you're considering Prestige University.

E: Certainly. I've always been passionate about economics and its real-world applications. Prestige University's renowned economics program and faculty expertise really attracted me to the institution. I'm particularly interested in the research opportunities and experiential learning opportunities offered here.

I: That's great to hear. Can you tell me about a challenging academic project or experience you've had in high school and how you handled it?

E: Absolutely. Last year, I participated in a national economics competition where we were tasked with analyzing the impact of globalization on local industries. It was a complex project that required extensive research and collaboration with teammates. Despite facing initial challenges in synthesizing large amounts of data, we were able to develop innovative solutions and present our findings effectively. It taught me the importance of perseverance and teamwork in tackling complex problems.

I: Impressive. Beyond academics, we're also interested in your extracurricular activities and leadership experiences. Can you share a significant leadership role you've held and the impact you've made?

E: Of course. I served as the president of our school's debate club, where I led a team of passionate students in organizing debates and public speaking workshops. One of our notable achievements was organizing a community debate on environmental sustainability, which sparked meaningful discussions and raised awareness about local environmental issues. Through this experience, I developed valuable leadership, communication, and organizational skills.

I: That sounds like a meaningful initiative. How do you envision yourself contributing to the Prestige University community outside of the classroom?

E: I'm eager to get involved in various student organizations and community service projects that align with my interests and values. Whether it's joining the economics club, volunteering at a local nonprofit, or participating in research opportunities, I'm committed to making a positive impact and fostering a vibrant campus community.

I: It's clear that you're passionate about your academic and extracurricular pursuits. Before we conclude, do you have any questions for me about Prestige University or the admissions process?

E: Yes, I'm curious about the opportunities for undergraduate research and internships in the economics department.

I: That's a great question. We offer numerous research opportunities and partnerships with industry leaders that provide valuable hands-on experience for our students. I'd be happy to provide more information about specific programs and resources available to economics majors.

E: Thank you, Sarah. I appreciate your insights.

I: It was a pleasure speaking with you, Alex. Thank you for your time and best of luck with your college decisions.

E: Thank you, Sarah. I look forward to the possibility of being part of the Prestige University community.

In this example, Alex effectively communicates his academic interests, leadership experiences, and enthusiasm for joining the Prestige University community, while also demonstrating curiosity and engagement in the conversation.

HOW TO MASTER YOUR NEXT INTERVIEW

Task 1: Read the following article, then complete the question on the next page.

An interview is like a key that can unlock the door to your dream job. It's a chance for you to showcase your skills, personality, and potential. To help you shine in your next interview, here are four simple yet crucial tips to keep in mind.

Prepare, Prepare, Prepare: Before the big day, gather all the information you can about the company and the job role. Learn about their products, services, and values. This will show the interviewer that you're genuinely interested and committed. Also, practice your answers to common questions like "Tell me about yourself" and "Why do you want this job?" This can boost your confidence and help you avoid stumbling during the interview.

Dress Smartly and Appropriately: First impressions matter, and your appearance plays a big role in that. Choose an outfit that's suitable for the company's culture. If it's a formal setting, wear business attire. If it's a more relaxed environment, opt for smart casual. Make sure your clothes are clean, well-fitting, and free from wrinkles. Remember, dressing appropriately shows that you take the interview seriously.

Body Language Speaks Volumes: Your words are important, but so is your body language. Maintain eye contact to show you're engaged and confident. Give a firm handshake at the beginning and end of the interview. Sit up straight to display attentiveness. Avoid fidgeting as it can make you seem nervous. A smile can go a long way in creating a positive connection with the interviewer.

Highlight Your Strengths with Examples: When the interviewer asks about your skills and experiences, don't just list them – provide examples. For instance, if they inquire about your teamwork abilities, mention a successful group project you led. If they ask about problem-solving skills, narrate a situation where you resolved a challenge creatively. These real-life instances help paint a vivid picture of your capabilities.

Remember, an interview is a chance for you to shine and stand out from the crowd. By preparing well, dressing appropriately, using positive body language, and showcasing your strengths with examples, you'll increase your chances of leaving a lasting and positive impression on the interviewer. Good luck!
