

Task 1: For each question, choose the correct answer.

Life skills for young people

Living away from home can be a difficult experience for a lot of young people. Many young people leave home to go to university or start a new career. Whether you're leaving home to study at university or to start work, there are some important life skills you need to have in order to live successfully on your own. Cooking is one of the first life skills to learn. You can start with simple food like curries and omelets. Later, you can try to cook your favorite foods. Being able to cook can save you money, and you can make sure you eat good healthy food if you cook it yourself. Many young people find it difficult to manage their money. Try to set a budget so that you always have enough money to pay important bills. It's really easy to open a savings account, which will help you to manage your money. Time management is another important skill. These days, technology like smartphones can help us to plan ahead and remind us about things we have to do. If you don't have a smartphone, you could always manage your schedule with a diary or a notebook.
