

Reading

"Janine's Rainforest Rescue"

1 In the heart of Costa Rica's lush rainforest, Janine Licare, a spirited teenager, discovered her purpose. Growing up surrounded by the vibrant green canopy and the symphony of exotic birds, she couldn't ignore the signs of distress. The rainforest was vanishing, and its inhabitants—the monkeys, toucans, and jaguars—were losing their homes.

5 At just nine years old, Janine decided to take action. She teamed up with her best friend, Aislin Livingstone, who shared her passion. Together, they founded "Kids Saving the Rainforest". Their mission? To protect the diverse wildlife and fragile ecosystems of Costa Rica's Pacific coast.

Janine and Aislin organized bake sales, spoke at school assemblies, and wrote heartfelt letters to local businesses. Their youthful determination caught the community's attention. Soon, donations 10 poured ("heavy rain") in, and they planted trees, created wildlife corridors, and rescued injured animals.

Their success extended beyond Costa Rica. Kids worldwide joined their cause, inspired by Janine's unwavering commitment. The rainforest echoed with gratitude—the monkeys swung freely, and the air smelled of hope.

Now, as young adults, Janine and Aislin continue their mission. They've become role models, proving 15 that age is no barrier to making a difference. Janine often says, "We're not just saving trees; we're saving our planet's heartbeat."

So, next time you hear the rustle of leaves in a rainforest, remember Janine—the girl who turned compassion into action, one tree at a time.

Answer the following questions. Find the phrase or sentence in the text.

Why did Janine decide to take action at just nine years old? (lines 2-4)

What is the mission of "Kids Saving the Rainforest"? (line 7-8)

How did Janine and Aislin contribute to their cause? (line 8-10)

Define the following terms related to the rainforest:

Deforestation

Ecosystems

Wildlife corridors

Injured animals

- A. Strips of natural habitat that connect fragmented habitats, allowing wildlife to move between them.
- B. The process of clearing or removing forests or trees.
- C. Animals that have been harmed or hurt due to various reasons.
- D. The interconnected system of living organisms (plants, animals, and microorganisms) and their physical environment.

What actions would you take to protect the rainforest?

How can young people make a difference in environmental conservation?

Janine decided to take action because she couldn't ignore the signs of distress in the rainforest. She saw that it was vanishing, and its inhabitants were losing their homes.

The mission of "Kids Saving the Rainforest" is to protect the diverse wildlife and fragile ecosystems of Costa Rica's Pacific coast.

Janine and Aislin organized bake sales, spoke at school assemblies, wrote heartfelt letters to local businesses, and planted trees. They also created wildlife corridors and rescued injured animals.

Title: "From Child Labourer to Changemaker"

In the bustling streets of Lagos, Nigeria, Peace Okebugwu, a determined teenager, witnessed the harsh reality faced by many children: child labour. These young souls toiled in hazardous conditions, their dreams stifled by poverty and exploitation.

At just fifteen, Peace decided to take action. She founded the "Beulah Future Leaders Foundation", a grassroots organization committed to ending child labour. With unwavering resolve, she rallied her community, educating parents, teachers, and local businesses about the perils of child exploitation.

Peace's approach was holistic. She provided tutoring for former child workers, ensuring they could continue their studies. Her foundation also raised awareness, emphasizing the importance of education over labour. Through workshops and campaigns, they reached schools, markets, and even street corners.

The impact was profound. Children once trapped in factories or on the streets now held textbooks. Their laughter echoed in safe spaces, away from hazardous machinery. Peace's tireless efforts led to policy changes, stricter enforcement, and increased penalties for those exploiting young lives.

Today, the Beulah Future Leaders Foundation thrives. Peace, now a college student, remains at its helm. She believes that education is the key to breaking the cycle of poverty and child labour. Her motto? "Every child deserves a chance to learn, dream, and soar."

As the sun sets over Lagos, Peace reflects on her journey—from a child labourer herself to a beacon of hope. She knows that her work is far from done, but she's determined to create a world where no child's innocence is stolen by labour.