Five steps to friendship

If you wanted a new friend, what would you do? It's not as simple as you might think. We usually find friends in the places where we live, study, work or relax. So our classmates and teammates can easily become friends, but how?

- 1 The first step normally happens when one person shares some information. This could be anything from a comment about a funny TV show to food that you can't stand. Or you could tell someone about your likes and dislikes, for example.
- 2 That's a great start. You aren't strangers, but you aren't best friends yet. Next, we need the other person to reply with similar thoughts about that TV show or another horrible food. From here, it's easier to have more conversations about other things. When two people have talked about their thoughts and opinions, they're starting to make friends.
- 3 The third step involves being a good friend. To take this step, you need to listen to your friend and help them. Over time, you can share problems and talk about lots of things. You know the other person is always ready to listen and support you. That's a really good friendship.
- 4 The fourth step is about looking for friends who support our social identity. What does that mean? If dancing or basketball is really important in your life, then you will probably want friends who see you as a good dancer or a basketball player. That's why we choose friends who are like a mirror. They show us a picture of how we like to be.
- 5 Finally, remember to stay in touch with your friends. A good way to do this is to make time to see your friends or to phone them and send messages when you're not in the same place. It's important to remember that friendship needs work!

- 6 Work in pairs. What else is important for making and keeping friends?
