William: Hey stranger! I'm William.

Camille: Oh, That's right! The guy from the library.

William: It's good to see you.

Camille: Good to see you, too.

William: What are you doing here? Maybe I could help you out.

Camille: Yes, of course. Weekend is coming and I want to visit places nearby.

But, I don't know where to go.

William: Well, I love Santa Marta. It's a good place to take amazing pictures.

In my opinion, beautiful scenery and great beaches are important when choosing a destination.

Camille: That's right! I think good food is important too.

William: Indeed! I think learning is also important. And Santa Marta has a lot of culture, tradition and history as well.

Camille: Can you give me an example?

William: Yeah, sure. La Quinta De San Pedro is an hacienda. It's famous for being the death place of Simon Bolivar.

Camille: Simon Bolivar?

William: Oh God! Simon Bolivar. The First President of Colombia. The one who liberated The New Granada.

Camille: New Granada?

William: Hmm... let's go Cam. You have a lot to learn! Santa Marta is our destination.

Camille: Our destination?

William: Of course. I'm coming with you!

Camille: Seriously, New Granada? Who named a place after a weapon?
