Robert Allen – tour guide

§ 1. Seven years ago, I was studying Tourism at college, but needed to find a part-time job as my course was rather expensive. After considering several options, I trained to become a weekend tour guide in my home city –

Chicago. This involved taking visitors around the city, and I was surprised to discover how much I enjoyed giving those tours. I got to see the city that I'd been living in my whole life through the eyes of tourists, and it felt like a new experience every time!

§ 2. After finishing my studies, I decided to go into tour guiding full-time. Although I thought it would be quite simple, in fact when I researched what I had to do, I found out that to get a licence as a full-time tour guide, I needed to know a lot more than I'd learnt so far. All city guides have to be able to answer hundreds of questions about the city, covering everything from local architecture and history to the rules of public transport. After several challenging but interesting months, I gained my tour-guide qualification and registered as an independent tour guide.

§ 3. Tour guiding isn't just about knowing historical facts or making sure you don't lose anyone from your group in the crowds. There are many other necessary skills. You should be able to be entertaining and tell interesting stories, and above all, you need to be able to react to changing situations, for example, if a place that you thought was open is actually closed when you arrive, or a route changes. Tourists don't want to hear what the problems are or that they're missing out on something, they just want to enjoy a well-organised tour.

§ 4. I need to make sure visitors are happy with my tours, otherwise they could post a negative review online. Like most tour guides, I realise that these reviews are really important, as good reviews attract more customers. That's why making tours fun and stress-free is essential. For me, the enthusiasm energy I put into my job means that my reviews are usually very good, and my tours are often recommended to other visitors coming to Chicago.

Every season, the great fashion houses of Europe and America present their new collections in the hope of persuading people to (B19) (NEW) their wardrobes by purchasing the latest designs. In my opinion, one does not have to be a slave to fashion in order to look smart. Following the latest trends in fashion can be (B20) (EXTREME) expensive. What is more, (B21) (FOLLOW) of fashion often give up their individuality for the sake of fashion. They choose clothes which suit neither their figures nor their personalities. This is (B22) (FORTUNATE), as the way we dress should reflect who we really are. I strongly believe that it is advisable to dress with style by choosing good quality clothes which suit you as an individual.
