Most of us do this quite <sup>2.</sup> frequent / frequently , but some of us don't check and compare prices <sup>3.</sup> less carefully / as carefully as others. Everyone should do this, because not every special offer is "special". For example, my friend Linda and I were shopping yesterday when we saw a big red sign: Today Only! Five T-shirts for £50! Although Linda does <sup>4.</sup> better / well in algebra than me, I can <sup>5.</sup> easily / easy do arithmetic. On the special offer, the shirts were £10 each. But what about buying just one? A sales assistant <sup>6.</sup> helpful / helpfully answered my question about this. For a single shirt, the shop charged <sup>7.</sup> exactly / more exactly the same as on the special offer: £10 a shirt. Some shops act <sup>8.</sup> more honest / more honestly than this, but it's always worth checking out just how special an offer really is.
