Every year in Malaysia, there's a celebration called the Dragon Boat Festival. The festival is on the fifth day of the fifth lunar month and people celebrate it to remember the death of Qu Yuan, a Chinese hero.

During the Dragon Boat Festival, people eat rice dumplings called zong zi. There's also a race where teams compete in dragon boats and paddle to the beat of the drum. It's noisy, but also exciting.

I don't usually watch the race, but I always eat the rice dumplings. I like eating them because they're really delicious.
