Anime and Manga

Anime is a Japanese video cartoon that began when Japan tried to make movies in the Western way. To make these "Western" movies, the money was not enough, places were difficult to film, and Japanese actors looked different from other people in the world. So, directors preferred cartoons and asked artists to draw villages or people not found in other movies; for example, they started making people with big heads, lots of hair and colorful eyes.

Most Anime movies come from comics or Manga, which means written and drawn stories. During the 1970s, many Anime movies were based on Manga written by Osamu Tezuka, an artist well-known for his writings about the future, wonderful machines and amazing adventures. Here in the West, we believe Anime is about Japanese cartoons, but it's actually the word they use in Japan for any kind of video cartoon. The same happens with Manga, which in Japan refers to all comics everywhere, but in the West means Japanese comics. Anime movies are made by special teams with the help of computer programs, while Manga can be written and drawn by a single artist.

International companies rewrite Manga stories from Japanese into other languages and sell them. However, some fans do this before the companies in order to share the stories online for free. So, more people can read Manga now, but some companies say that's a form of stealing.
