Grammar

Choose the best answer A, B, C, or D.

Many secondary school students dream of studying abroad because they think it is a wonderful opportunity. However, while studying in (1) _____ foreign country such as _____ (2) US, students may experience culture shock. One of the best ways to deal with culture shock is to research _____ (3) local culture in advance. For example, if you're attending _____ (4) UK university, reading about British culture can be helpful. This will help you understand how to interact with local people. You'll also be prepared to deal with any differences between _____ (5) two cultures. Making friends with other students, joining clubs, or attending social events at the university is another way to overcome culture shock.
