Most people think that housework is boring and is the (1) (trách nhiệm) of wives and mothers only. Many parents don't ask their children to do housework so that they have more time to play or study. However, studies show doing (2) (việc nhà) is good for children.

Kids who do housework develop important (3) (kỹ năng sống) that they will need for the rest of their lives. Doing the laundry, cleaning the house, and taking care of others are among the important skills that children will need when they start their own families. These are the things that schools cannot fully teach, so it's important (4) children to learn them at home. Sharing housework also helps young people learn to (5) (trách nhiệm) responsibility. They know that they have to try to finish their (6) (nhiệm vụ) even though they do not enjoy doing them. Doing chores also helps develop children's (7) (lòng biết ơn) to their parents. When doing housework, they learn to (8) (trân trọng) all the hard work their parents do around the house for them. In addition, doing chores together helps (9) family bonds, creating special (10) between children and parents. It makes children feel they are members of a team.

All in all, doing housework can bring a lot of (11) (lợi ích) to children. It teaches them life skills and helps build their (12) (tính cách). Therefore, parents should (1) (khuyến khích) their kids to share the housework for their own good as well as the good of the whole family.
